2. Large Crowd Safety: A big crowd of visitors will arrive before dark. Please walk with care on the river bridge.
3. Special Care for Patients: If you have a sick family member or patient, there is a quiet resting room with clean water and medicine near the East Gate.

Text B: Soryu Dojo Record & Conversation

Master Keizo sat in the quiet room of the Soryu Dojo. Outside, the evening air was peaceful, but the streets were already getting busy for the summer event. Keizo looked at Hakuji, his young student, who was carefully carrying a bowl of fresh water to the bedroom.

"How is Koyuki feeling today, Hakuji?" Keizo asked with a warm smile.

"She is doing better, Master Keizo," Hakuji replied softly. "She took her morning medicine, and she is resting now. The doctor said she needs strength, but she will recover with good food and quiet care."

Keizo nodded. "You have taken great care of my daughter since the day you arrived. When you first came to this town, you fought with everyone because you had no home. But I saw your true heart. You have great skill, but your real power is your heart to protect others."

Hakuji looked down at his hands. Three years ago, he was alone and angry at the world. People called him bad, and town guards stopped him when he tried to get medicine for his sick father. But Master Keizo gave him a home and treated him like a son.

"Master," Hakuji said, "I made a promise to Koyuki. When she becomes strong enough to walk outside, I will carry her to the river so we can watch the fireworks together."

"That is a wonderful promise," Keizo said. "You are like the stone lion dog outside the temple. You always stand as a guard for those who are weak."

Keizo then pointed to the town notice on the table. "There will be a large crowd tonight. Some people from the nearby sword dojo do not like our hand fighting style. If a stranger comes near our gate or our well, stay calm and keep everyone safe."

"I will, Master," Hakuji said. "I will protect this dojo and Koyuki with my life."
